PREFACE.

From the close of the revolutionary war to September, 1789, there was practically no United States Army. A regiment of infantry and a battalion of artillery—in all, about 700 officers and men—were retained at the close of the war to guard public stores and property and to occupy posts vacated by the British on the northwest boundaries of the United States. By act of Congress of June 3, 1784, it was resolved, "As it appears absolutely necessary to have 700 noncommissioned officers and men, properly officered, it is recommended to the following States, as most convenient to the posts shortly to be vacated by the British, to furnish from their militia: Connecticut, 165; New York, 165; New Jersey, 110; Pennsylvania, 260, to serve twelve months, unless sooner discharged."

The troops thus provided for were formed into a regiment, consisting of eight companies of infantry and two companies of artillery, under the command of Lieut. Col. Josiah Harmar.

By subsequent legislation slight changes were made in the number and organization of the troops, and the reenlistment of the 700 men engaged under the resolution of April 12, 1785, was authorized by Congress October 3, 1787. This force, then consisting of a battalion (four companies) of artillery and a regiment (eight companies) of infantry, was, by the act of September 29, 1789, "recognized to be the establishment for the troops in the service of the United States."

No appointments or commissions had been issued by the General Government, the officers holding their appointments from the States which had furnished the quota. The officers retained in service were all commissioned as of the United States Army from September 29, 1789.

Everything relating to the appointment of officers was destroyed by the burning of the War Department, November 9, 1800. It therefore became necessary, in order to supply the missing links, to search the Executive Journals of the United States Senate, pay accounts in the Treasury Department, old manuscript registers in the possession of families or descendants of deceased officers, etc. In brief, neither labor nor expense has been spared in securing the most reliable information possible in the effort to produce this compilation, in the hope that it may be a standard and reliable work of reference.

[a] From the date of General Washington's death, Dec. 14, 1799, to June 1, 1821, when General Brown assumed command, there was no general officer formally assigned to the permanent command of the Army. During this period direct control of the Army (except at irregular intervals from June, 1800, to Jan., 1812, when General Wilkinson exercised command) was exercised by the Secretary of War. In the above list, however, the name of the senior officer of the Army is given for each period specified from Dec., 1799 to June, 1821.

[b] General Scott left for Mexico Nov. 24, 1846, and from that date to May 11, 1849, he had no control of the Army not included in his own command. He was assigned to the command of the eastern division Aug. 31, 1848, and resumed command of the Army May 11, 1849.

[c] General McClellan did not exercise command of the Army after Mar. 11, 1862, General Halleck assumed command July 23, 1862.

The President of the United States is at all times the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy.

CHIEFS OF BUREAUS OR STAFF CORPS OF THE ARMY, 1775 TO 1903.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The Adjutant-General's Department eo nomine was first established under the act of March 3, 1813.

From the disbandment of the Army in 1783 until the act of March 3, 1791, there was no regular Adjutant-General. The act of March 5, 1792, provided for an adjutant who should also do duty as inspector, and this dual function continued until the reorganization of the Army in 1821, which abolished the office of Adjutant and Inspector-General. This act, in effect, reduced the Adjutant-General's Department to one officer. There appears to have been no change in the legal status of the Department from that date to 1838, when, by the act of July 5 of that year, the President was empowered to appoint as many assistant adjutant-generals, not exceeding six, as he might deem necessary.

[a] Colonel Pickering was elected a member of the Board of War November 7, 1777, but continued to do duty as Adjutant-General until General Scammel's arrival, January 13, 1778.

[b] Colonel Scammel resigned his staff appointment January 1, 1781, to take command of the First New Hampshire Regiment, but remained at headquarters until relieved by General Hand, January 12, 1781.

[c] On the general disbandment of the Continental Army, Captain North, who had been designated as inspector to the troops remaining in service, acted as adjutant and inspector to October 28, 1787.

[d] The act of March 3, 1797, permitted the brigadier-general (general in chief) to select his brigade major from the line of the Army. Major Cushing, not having relinquished his rank in the infantry on being appointed inspector, was selected by General Wilkinson and continued to perform the duties of inspector and adjutant until May 22, 1798.

[e] The act of May 14, 1800, disbanded the Adjutant-General, and the duties of adjutant and inspector were performed, under detail, by Major Cushing (who resided in Washington) from June 15, 1800, to April 2, 1807.

[f] Colonel Macomb relieved Major Nicoll April 28, 1812, having been directed in War Department order of that date "to perform the duties of Adjutant-General until further orders."

[a] General Pike was killed, after the capture of York, Upper Canada, by the explosion of a magazine April 27, 1813. From this time until May 19, 1814, the office remained vacant, the act of March 3, 1813, having been construed to the effect that there could be but one Adjutant and Inspector-General, who must either be an officer appointed and confirmed to that office, or else be a brigadier-general especially designated by the President to perform the functions. The affairs of the office were meanwhile administered by Maj. C. K. Gardner, Assistant Adjutant-General, until December 30, 1813, and from that date to May 28, 1814 (with the exception of the brief term of service of General Winder), by Col. J. De B. Walbach, Adjutant-General, who was relieved at that date by Maj. John R. Bell, assistant inspector.

[b] General Parker was appointed Paymaster-General June 1, 1821. By general orders of that date from Headquarters of the Army, Lieut. E. Kirby, aid-de-camp, was directed to perform the duties of Adjutant-General of the Army until further orders.

[c] Colonel Gadsden's appointment was not confirmed by the Senate, and his commission expired March 22, 1822. On the following April 12 the President renominated him for the office, but the Senate adhered to its original determination.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The Inspector-General's Department was first established under the act of March 3, 1813, with an organization of eight inspectors-general and sixteen adjutants-general.

The office of Inspector-General dates from December 13, 1777, although Lieutenant-Colonel de la Balme, a French officer of cavalry, was appointed by Congress July 8, 1777, Inspector-General of Cavalry; and on August 11 M. du Coudray, a French artillery officer, was appointed Inspector-General of Ordnance and Military Manufactures. The Continental Congress resolved that two inspectors-general be appointed, and Brig. Gen. Thos. Conway was elected, but the other was not chosen.

JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The offices of "Judge-Advocate-General" and "Judge-Advocate of the Army" (the first named created in 1775, when William Tudor, a law pupil of John Adams and a leading counselor of Boston, was elected to that position) lapsed in 1802, the act of March 16, of that year, limiting the line of the Army to three regiments. The last named was revived by the act of January 11, 1812, and again discontinued on the reorganization of the Army in 1821. The act of March 2, 1849, authorized the President to appoint a suitable person as Judge-Advocate of the Army. The Bureau of Military Justice was created June 20, 1864, but by the act of July 5, 1884, it was, with the Corps of Judge-Advocates, consolidated under the title of "Judge-Advocate-General's Department."

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

The earliest legislation relating to the Quartermaster's Department dates from June 16, 1775, when Congress "resolved that there be one Quartermaster-General for the grand Army and one deputy under him for the separate army," and May 14, 1777, Congress adopted regulations for the guidance of the Quartermaster-General and his assistants.

July 15, 1780, Congress resolved that there be one Quartermaster-General and one assistant quartermaster-general, to be appointed by Congress, and one deputy quartermaster for each army, to be appointed by the Quartermaster-General, and promulgated a code of regulations for the government of the Quartermaster's Department.

July 25, 1785, the "Department of Quartermaster-General" ceased to exist.

The Quartermaster's Department, eo nomine, was first organized under the act of March 28, 1812.

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT.

The earliest legislation relative to the subsistence of the Army is found in the resolution of the Continental Congress dated June 16, 1775, creating the office of Commissary-General of Stores and Provisions. The range of duties of that office was so extensive that much dissatisfaction prevailed with respect to the administration of the affairs of the department, and Congress, June 10, 1777, instituted a new system, creating two great branches—one under a Commissary-General of Purchases and the other under a Commissary-General of Issues, the former, by resolution of June 11, "to keep his office in the place where Congress shall sit."

The act of April 14, 1818, first created the office of Commissary-General, the incumbent to be appointed as soon as the state of existing contracts for the subsistence of the Army would permit.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

July 27, 1775, Congress created a Hospital Department for the Army, its chief being designated as Director-General and Chief Physician. By the resolution of April 7, 1777, Congress adopted the scheme for a Medical Department prepared by the Army Medical Committee of Congress, based on the organization of the British service, and accepted because it was so; for, as General Washington said, "The number of officers mentioned in the inclosed plan, I presume, are necessary for us, because they are found so in the British hospitals."

For some years subsequent to the close of the Revolutionary war the Army consisted of troops enlisted for short terms of service, with no provision for medical service other than that afforded by regimental medical officers. The act of March 16, 1802, allowed 2 surgeons and 25 mates as the peace establishment, and by the act of April 12, 1808, the President was authorized to appoint such number of hospital surgeons and surgeons' mates as the service might require. There was, however, no provision made for a chief of the Department until, under the act of March 3, 1813, the office of Physician and Surgeon-General was created; but the act of April 14, 1818, gave to the Medical Department, for the first time in its history, a permanent chief under the title of "Surgeon-General."

PAY DEPARTMENT.

The earliest legislation creating a Pay Department is the resolution of the Continental Congress, June 16, 1775, which provided for a Paymaster-General and a deputy under him, for the Army, in a separate department.

The Revolutionary Army was disbanded November 3. 1783, but Paymaster-General Pierce was continued in service settling his accounts and as commissioner for settling the accounts of the Army. The two offices were united by the resolution of March 23, 1787, and after the death of John Pierce, in 1788, the duties of the office of Paymaster-General were administered by Joseph Howell, jr., Commissioner of Army Accounts, until the appointment of a Paymaster of the Army, May, 1792.

The Pay Department, by that name, was first organized under the act of April 24, 1816, but a Paymaster for the Army "to reside near the headquarters of the troops of the United States" had been authorized by the act of May 8, 1792.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

The earliest records relative to what is now known as the Corps of Engineers are very incomplete, but the journals of the Continental Congress indicate the gradual development of the corps under the peculiar conditions then existing. Thus, on June 16, 1775, the day before the battle of Bunker Hill, one chief engineer and two assistants were authorized for the "Grand Army," and one chief engineer and two assistants "in a separate department."

The first formal establishment of a Corps of Engineers dates from March 11, 1779. The corps was disbanded in November, 1783, but partially revived May 9, 1794, and perfected by the act of March 16, 1802. In the earlier period of its organization the duties now pertaining to the Corps of Engineers were divided between two different branches, but although, as early as July 25, 1777, a "geographer and surveyor of the roads" was authorized, the special functions of topographical engineers were not specifically provided for until the act of March 3, 1813, authorizing eight topographical engineers and eight assistants. In August, 1818, a separate Topograhical Bureau was established in the War Department, under the immediate direction of the Secretary of War and the Chief Engineer. June 21, 1831, the Topographical Bureau was constituted by the Secretary of War a distinct bureau of the War Department; and by the act of July 5, 1838, an independent corps of topographical engineers was created. It was abolished by the act of March 3, 1863, and merged into the Corps of Engineers.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

May 27, 1775, Congress appointed a committee to consider ways and means to supply the colonies with ammunition and military stores, and the British Government having prohibited the exportation of arms and ammunition to any of the plantations the Congress authorized the exportation of produce in all vessels importing munitions of war.

While, July 16, 1776, a Commissioner of Artillery Stores was appointed (April 11, 1777, styled Commissioner-General of Military Stores) the business of procuring arms and ammunition was conducted by a secret committee and the Board of War.

The act of April 2, 1794, authorized the President to appoint an officer whose duty, under the Department of War, was to superintend the receiving, safe-keeping, and distribution of military stores.

The Ordnance Department was first established under the act of May 14, 1812. It was not provided for in the reduction of the Army March 3, 1815; but the act of April 24, 1816, provided that it be continued as organized under the act of February 8, 1815.

By the act of March 2, 1821, the Ordnance Department, as an independent bureau, was abolished and merged in the artillery. The President was authorized to select such artillery officers as might be necessary to perform ordnance duties, and to each regiment of that arm one supernumerary captain was attached for ordnance duty.

The Department was reorganized on an independent footing by the act of April 5, 1832.

SIGNAL CORPS.

The Signal Corps owes its origin to Maj. Albert J. Myer, who entered the Army in 1854 as an assistant surgeon, and whose active interest in sign language was manifested by its development, in 1856, into a system of signal communication which, attracting at first little or no attention, was two years later submitted to a military board convened for its consideration. It was not, however, until June 21, 1860, that Congress authorized the addition to the staff of the Army of one signal officer with the rank and pay of a major of cavalry. The "Signal Corps" was organized by the act of March 3, 1863.

ARTILLERY.

[NOTE.—The dates opposite the names of the officers refer to the period they belonged to the organizations, and not in all cases date of rank. For date of rank and continuity of service see names in alphabetical list in Part II.]

BATTALION OF ARTILLERY.

(Four companies.)

September 29, 1789, to May 9, 1794.

One of these companies (Captain Doughty's) was retained in service from the Revolutionary Army; one other company (Captain Douglass's) was raised in Pennsylvania as part of that State's quota under resolve of Congress June 3, 1784; the two companies forming part of the infantry regiment under the command of Lieut. Col. Josiah Harmar. The other two companies were organized under the resolve of Congress of October 20, 1786, and the four companies were formed into a battalion under the command of Maj. John Doughty. By the act of September 29, 1789, this battalion was recognized as part of the establishment for the troops in the service of the United States.

On September 4, 1792, under the act of March 5, 1792, one company was assigned to each of the four sublegions into which the army was organized, and under the act of May 9, 1794, the Corps of Artillerists and Engineers authorized by that act was incorporated with this battalion, and the whole thereafter designated as the Corps of Artillerists and Engineers.

Organized under the act of May 9, 1794, and incorporated with the preceding battalion of artillery, the whole to consist of four battalions of four companies each. The organization of the Corps of Artillerists and Engineers marked an important epoch in the military policy of the Government—the setting apart a portion of the Military Establishment for the duty, more particularly, of defending an extensive seacoast. The act of March 3, 1799, provided for placing the Corps and the Regiment of Artillerists and Engineers upon the same footing, and thereafter this organization was designated as the "First Regiment of Artillerists and Engineers." On April 1, 1802, under the act of March 16, 1802, the Artillerists and Engineers as a combined arm disappeared, and from the two regiments was formed the "Regiment of Artillerists."

On April 1, 1802, the Artillerists and Engineers as a combined arm disappeared, and from the two regiments was formed the "Regiment of Artillerists."

Formed April 1, 1802, under the act of March 16, 1802, from the preceding two regiments of Artillerists and Engineers, to consist of five battalions of four companies each. The act of January 11, 1812, authorized two regiments of artillery, which were designated as the Second and Third Regiments of artillery, and this regiment was thereafter known as the First Regiment of Artillery, but as regards promotion of the officers these regiments were always distinct—the First, or Regiment of Artillerists, was known as of the "peace establishment," and the rolls, returns, and reports were made out as of the "Regiment of Artillerists." On May 12, 1814, under the act of March 30, 1814, this regiment was consolidated with the Second and Third Regiments of artillery, forming the "Corps of Artillery."

April 12, 1808, to June 1, 1821.

Organized under the act of April 12, 1808, to consist of ten companies. Capt. Geo. Peter's was the only company of this regiment which, prior to the war of 1812, was at any time equipped as field artillery. It was mounted as such in 1808 and dismounted in 1809. When the war of 1812 broke out some of the companies were equipped, and for a short time served as horse artillery, and others as field artillery. On May 17, 1815, under the act of March 3, 1815, the Fifteenth, Twenty-sixth, Thirtieth, Thirty-first, Thirty-fourth, and Forty-fifth Regiments of infantry were ordered to be mustered for consolidation with this regiment. On June 1, 1821, under the act of March 2, 1821, this organization ceased, and the companies were distributed among the present First, Second, Third, and Fourth Regiments of artillery.

The act of July 5, 1838, added one company, the act of March 3, 1847, added two companies, and the act of March 2, 1899, added two batteries to each regiment of artillery. The act of February 11, 1847, authorized two majors and a quartermaster to each regiment in the Army, and under the act of March 3, 1847, the President was authorized to designate an additional company in each regiment of artillery to be equipped as light artillery. By the act of July 28, 1866, the first, second, third, and fourth regiments of artillery were allowed three majors, and companies were designated batteries. The designation "Battery" will be applied to companies of artillery not mounted, and the designation "Light Battery" to those mounted.—Adjutant-General, May 20, 1871. The act of February 2, 1901, discontinued the regimental organization of the artillery, and thereafter the artillery arm of the service was designated Artillery Corps, to consist of 30 batteries of field artillery and one hundred and twenty-six companies coast artillery.]

This regiment was organized under the resolve of Congress of June 3, 1784, to serve twelve months, and by subsequent resolves of Congress continued until, by the act of September 29, 1789, it was recognized as part of the establishment for the troops in the service of the United States as the Regiment of Infantry. The act of April 30, 1790, more fully completed the organization of the regiment. Upon the organization of the additional regiment authorized by the act of March 3, 1791, this became the First Regiment of Infantry. On September 4, 1792, by direction of the President under section 3 of the act of March 5, 1792, the Army was designated the "Legion of the United States," which was divided into four sublegions. The regiment formed part of the First Sublegion, and so continued to November 1, 1796, when it reverted to its former designation of First Regiment of Infantry.

On May 17, 1815, under the act of March 3, 1815, the regiment was consolidated with the Seventeenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-eighth, and Thirty-ninth regiments of infantry to form the Third Regiment of Infantry.

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT.

June 26, 1812, to May 17, 1815.

Organized under the act of June 26, 1812. The regiment was consolidated May 17, 1815, under the act of March 3, 1815, with the Fifth and Thirty-fifth regiments of infantry, to form the Eighth Regiment of Infantry.

[NOTE.—It will be observed that in the eight regiments of infantry (Eighteenth to Twenty-fifth, inclusive) organized under the act of June 26, 1812, many of the field officers have a date of rank anterior to the act. They were nominated and confirmed as officers of infantry under the act of January 11, 1812, as of the dates here given, and were originally intended for the ten additional regiments of infantry (Eighth to Seventeenth, inclusive). The assignment to regiments of all the officers was, however, not made until after the act of June 26, 1812. Subsequently a board of officers was appointed to consider the date of rank and prior service in the Army or militia of the officers appointed under the act of January 11, 1812, and upon their report the date of rank was changed to July 6, 1812. See (section 3) act of March 17, 1812, and the Army Registers for 1812 and 1813. In this compilation the original date of rank is adhered to.]

LEGION.

THE LEGION OF THE UNITED STATES.

March 5, 1792, to November 1, 1796.

Organized under section 3 of the act of March 5, 1792. Section 2 of the act of March 5, 1792, authorized the raising of three additional regiments of infantry, a squadron of dragoons, and also directed the completion of the two regiments of infantry and the battalion of artillery then in service. Section 3 of the same act provided "That it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to organize the said five regiments of infantry and the said corps of horse and artillery, as he shall judge expedient, diminishing the number of corps and adding to another, as shall appear to him proper." * * * Under the provision of this section, and upon the recommendation of Gen. Henry Knox, the then Secretary of War, President Washington directed the formation of "The Legion of the United States." On April 9, 1792, the President nominated to the Senate six majors for the "proposed third and fourth legionary corps," three to each; also surgeons and surgeons' mates for the "four proposed legionary corps." On September 4, 1792, Maj. Gen. Anthony Wayne, then Commander in Chief, in general orders, dated Pittsburg, Pa., announced and prescribed the formation of the Legion of the United States, which was to consist of four sublegions, each sublegion to be commanded by a brigadier-general. On December 27, 1792, Congress was informed of the President's action. In the formation of first and second sublegions, the First Infantry became part of the First Sublegion and the Second Infantry part of the Second Sublegion. The legion, however, was not fully completed until the spring of 1793, when, instead of a brigadier-general to command a sublegion (several having declined the appointment of brigadier-general), the President nominated officers to the rank of lieutenant-colonel as commandants of the four sublegions.

In the first and second sublegions the field officers are shown as beginning with September 4, 1792, and in the third and fourth sublegion date of actual rank is stated.

On November 1, 1796, under the act of May 30, 1796, the President arranged and completed out of the legion four regiments of infantry and two companies of light dragoons, forming the regiments as far as practicable, so that the infantry of the First Sublegion again became the First Infantry and of the Second Sublegion the Second Infantry. The infantry of the Third Sublegion became the Third Infantry and of the Fourth Sublegion the Fourth Infantry. Officers and soldiers not retained were discharged November 1, 1796, with six months' pay and subsistence.

Order showing the formation of "The Legion of the United States."
